A NEW NOVEL.

Just Published, and for Sale by

COTTOM & STEWART,

Price 1 Dollar,

GLENCARN;

OR

THE DISAPPOINTMENTS OF YOUTH,

A NOVEL.

By George Watterston, Esq.
Of Washington City,
Author of the Lawyer and Child of Feeling.

The celebrity of this author's "LAWYER," and "CHILD OF FEELING" induced the publishers to engage in this work, and without detracting from the merits of the former, feel themselves justified in stating that his GLENCARN is superior to either. It is submitted without further recommendation, with a wish, that the American reviewers may give further encouragement to this young gentleman's endeavors to entertain instruct and moralize his fellow citizens, in a way seemingly well calculated to attract their attention.

From the Freeman's Journal.

DEMOCRATIC FLAGELLATION!

From the very bottom of our hearts we pity the majority men in Congress. Whenever they appear to be convinced by the arguments of the minority, and inclined to do that which is right, the Democratic Editorial Bull Dogs are let loose and threaten them in such a manner, that they are forced to turn back. Being naturally weak men, and unfit for the stations they fill, their undecisive weathercock policy not only invites insult from their tyrannical party-masters, but is also attended with the unhappy consequence of causing the people to despise their representatives. If the majority men in congress could only hear men of all parties speak of them, wish they would adjourn, take off the non-interceurse and not trifle with the people any longer, they would be appalled. But the fact is so; and though the Aurora may feel ashamed to tell it to them, we will do our duty.—They have spun out a session of considerable length without doing any thing to relieve the people from the intolerable burdens imposed on them by democratic misrule. They have tantalized them for months, and no wonder their patience is exhausted. But we do not blame the representatives so much as those who elected them. So long as men are elected from party motives, and not from a conviction of possessing superior talents and integrity, so long will the country be nerveless and inefficient and the people oppressed.

The Mosaic law allowed only thirty and nine stripes to be inflicted on offenders, but Baptis Irvine, the democratic Whig of Baltimore, seems disposed to inflict at least one hundred more on his political friends in congress. While we disapprove of the indecent manner in which the Whig treats the democratic representatives, we re-publish it to shew the world what opinion that party entertain of the men to whom they gave their votes. Talk not of democratic virtue after this.

[FROM THE BALTIMORE WHIG.]

STRANGE THINGS.

"We have seen strange things to-day."

Luke, v. 26.

FIRST LESSON.

It is strange, that the majority in congress, having lost their character, should display no desire to regain it; i. e. that having persuaded every person of their incapacity to govern, they should not be anxious to convince the public to the contrary.

It is strange, that nominal republicans forsake their old professions, and fall in love with Hamilton's schemes of banking and finance—merely because Gallatin proposes them anew.

It is strange, that the representatives of freemen are inclined to submit; (their resolutions, oaths and duties, to the contrary notwithstanding!)

It is strange, that the majority in congress, can look at each other for three or FOUR MONTHS, meet, adjourn, pick the people's pockets, and do—nothing—all without blushing for their degeneracy.

It is strange, that we have a non-intercourse with England, and yet four American vessels arrive at Liverpool per day.

It is strange, that though some of our members of congress are of opinion that the non-intercourse law, is not in force, yet nothing is done or proposed, to remedy the evil.

It is strange, that one man can dictate to 72, and lead them wheresoever he will.

It is strange, that a majority of congress seem disposed to adopt their convoy bill, the submission principle proposed by Gallatin to Mr. Erskine.

It will be stranger than all these things, if this pusillanimous junta do not overturn the republican party:—

And most strange, that any of the submission men expect an honest citizen can have the fool hardy temerity to defend them, ☞ when the next election comes about.

SECOND LESSON.

It is strange, that John Randolph should move to reduce nothing to something less than nothing; i. e. to a negative quantity—that he should reduce an army already reduced sufficiently. [But, as Congress has submitted, perhaps he is right! Cowardice is more ridiculous when it swaggers with a sword by its side, and a nodding crest upon its head. As for the contemptible navy, it is a deceptive thing to rely on. It ought either to be sold or burnt, or employed on our coast to prevent smuggling—and even for that purpose light armed cutters, or gun boats would be preferable. We ought never to dream of a navy; it will assuredly destroy the republic.]

It is strange, that the people should elect ignoramuses, not much wiser than oysters, to represent them.

It is not strange, that such creatures yield to the federal members (who have talents and effrontery) in almost every thing. The federalists in Congress generally force the republicans from their ground, force them into degrading concessions of fact and principle, and thus indirectly force them to their purpose. Dana and others, by laughing at them a couple of hours, were enabled to produce the Gothic resolution relative to Mr. Fulton's proposition to lecture in their hall. Thus a blot is fixed (even in that little matter,) upon the character of the nation.

Another method has been found successful in gulling our democratic dupes and palsying our party, viz.—By inducing ignoramuses to get upon stilts on all occasions: when an excellent unanswerable essay on national affairs, appears in a democratic newspaper, the federalists ask their stupid antagonists, if they are to be dictated to by newspapers; and the ignoramuses, to show their extreme elevation, superiority, and independence, mount stilts twenty feet high, and stalk along like overgrown boys, disregarding the lessons of wisdom, and wondering that other humble mortals are content to walk upon their own legs, on the bare ground! So that, if a patriot wishes a certain measure to succeed, he must propose a contrary plan in the newspapers.—This is the most fruitful source of our danger; the false pride and obstinacy of the ignorant. About thirty members of the house of representatives are an exception to the stilt-men.

It is strange, that the committee of ways and means should apply to Gallatin for instructions on all occasions: it would be more reasonable that the clerk should ask advice and direction of the merchant, than that the merchant should be directed in every thing by his clerk. But, since the learned committee did implore his aid, (on the belief that "every one who asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth.")

It is strange, that when they asked for bread, he gave them a stone; for a fish, a serpent; and, for an egg, a scorpion.

It is strange, the people do not perceive, that the extraordinary conduct of congress is produced by extraordinary causes—too bad and disgraceful to be mentioned. Let the democrats, at next election, change the whole representation, excepting, as above, thirty or forty members of the house of representatives——Nothing else can save the country, than the election of men of talents by the democratic party.

From the Independent American.

What in an individual would be considered as almost unparalleled in dishonor and fraud, is practised by the national legislature. The debtor passes an act of limitation, and tells the poverty struck worn out creditor soldier, or his petitioning widow and orphans, "We acknowledge that by your services, your blood, your toil and sacrifices, or those of your husband and father, you have atchieved independence, have been means of the establishment of our constitution, and have enabled us now to live on six dollars per day, while you have not six cents per day, and are many of you incapable of earning a farthing, from the loss of limbs or of health. We confess our obligations to you are great, and that your claims are perfectly just; but we some time since passed an act that we would never pay. You limping old soldiers, go home; if you can work, work; if you cannot labor, beg; if charity preserves a clenched hand, starve. You widows of generals, colonels and captains, knit, spin, sew, do kitchen work for our families; if you are not able to do any kind of labor, go to the poor-house. You orphans, petitioning for unpaid arrearages justly due to your illustrious fathers, most of you, we are confident, can get a living at the plough, or before the mast; if not, there is a work-house in every state for you."

Such, in fact, if not in speech, is the language of a democratic majority in the house of representatives. The federalists are almost to a man in favor of paying these claims. So are some of the democrats. It is a shameful, an infamous, a damnable excuse, made by many of the democrats, that they cannot consistently pay these claims on account of the statute of limitation. Such an act ought never to have passed, but how easy is it to have it repealed, in two days time. When Bonaparte tells these democrats to stop all intercourse with Hayti, the bill is passed in less than two days; but years go by, and they have not leisure, or forget to repeal this abominable act. How do they reason on the subject? I seldom look for goodness of intention among the democratic leaders. Self-interest and calculations for popularity are their principal calculations. They may reason thus: "If we pay what we owe it will make large holes in the national treasury. The very money that ought to be paid to the creditors, spent in useless offices throughout the U. States, and lavished on our minions, would create an incalculable number of friends. To pay, does not savor of economy."

Look at the debate on the claim of the widow of the late Gen. Hamilton. He was active in the funding of the debts due to the officers and soldiers of the revolution. He was accused of being thus active for his own payment and for purposes of speculation. Thus did the democrats of that day accuse him; judging that he would do as they knew they should do, in his situation. He never speculated: and delicacy prevented his demanding even his own dues. His widow now petitions; and by a small majority the claim is now granted. But what unwillingness was discovered: What unmanly sentiments uttered by some. Smilie, with mind of illimitable expansion, and heart of giant benevolence, would not pay a just debt, because, forsooth, because Hamilton was a federalist; and in the profound opinion of this great and good man, he was addicted to monarchical tendencies and British partialities. Root—What said this man of feeling—"Mrs. Hamilton, if she is distressed, can go to the poor-house."

Mr. Macon has been a strenuous opposer of almost all claims. He sometimes attempts to justify himself by saying they are debarred by the statute of limitation. Now, to use one of his favorite expressions, for God's sake why does he not exert himself to have that act repealed?

A hired B to labor for him four years.—At the end of the four years A told B that he had not the money by him then, but he had sufficient estate and ere long should be able to pay him; that should he be obliged to pay him then he should be ruined. B then followed the seas: now rich, afterwards captured and poor again: again rich, afterwards shipwrecked and all lost. Many years after, the shipwrecked and fortune buffetted mariner returned. Barefoot and shirtless he called on A for what was due to him. A had become immensely rich. A thus addressed him, "True my good friend, I did owe you; but since you have been absent, I gave notice that I would pay no debts not called for at a given time: that period has long since gone by. You, 'tis true had no knowledge of my determination, but your situation is as good as that of an hundred others, who never saw my advertisement. What's one man's loss is another's gain. I should do injustice to my family if I should pay you. But don't be discouraged; you can work yet; and when past labor, we have a poor house for you. I am busy now about my own affairs: there is the door; go, and never plague me again about old debts."

B dropt a few tears, and departed, in the same manner in which many and many a poor ragged soldier has slowly limped away on his crutch from the capitol here; spurned by those who, without his services, would never have had the power to lord it over him, and lay bare to his eye the black ingratitude of their hearts: spurned by those who can spend thousands upon thousands in nonsensical debate about a paltry point of diplomatic etiquette between a foreign minister and a predetermined administration; yet can coolly look on and see the indigent creditor starving for the want of crumbs that fall from the table which the debtor has himself provided.

TUESDAY, APRIL 3.

A letter from the Collector of the port of Philadelphia to a gentleman in Washington says "the John Adams is reported at my office as being in the Delaware a little below Reedy Island" Important despatches may be expected by this ship both from England and France.

A gentleman who arrived at this port yesterday, from Nassau, via Havanna, informs us, that before he left the former place, he read in an English paper the speech of the king, at the opening of parliament in January, in which his Britannic majesty, decidedly approves of the conduct of Mr. Jackson, and says that no other minister will be sent to this country if Mr J. should be unable to accomplish the object of his mission. A rumor that the king's speech had been received at Nassau reached this place some days since, via Amelia. Our informant left Nassau on the 22d ult.

We also learn from the same gentleman, that a government vessel arrived at Havanna about the 12th inst. from Cadiz, bringintelligence that the junta had removed to that city from Seville;—that the French armies were in the neighborhood of Cadiz;—and that a British fleet was in that harbor, on board of which they wished the junta to embark for South America; but that there appeared to be an unwillingness on the part of the junta to embark.

(Charleston Courier 26th ult.)

More Democratic Economy. —Some years since the "illustrious" Jefferson, and his "more or less" learned secretary of war, Dearborn, recommended a great economical reform in the army, by putting down the quarter master's department. The result is below, in a letter from col. Parker to the secretary of war, published, among other documents, by order of Congress.

(Freemans Journal.

Washington City Nov. 29, 1809.

SIR,

On the eve of leaving the army, (unless a prospect of active service should forbid it) permit me to address you on the important necessity of the quarter master's department being restored, if it was only on the ground of economy; for to that department belongs the care of all stores belonging to the army. By the derangement of that department, were strict enquiry made, it would be found that more than 100,000 dollars have been lost in the course of a few years by the abolotion of the Q. M's department, and the introduction of a system of militia agency. Instances may be found of characters being employed as agents, perfectly ignorant of military affairs and the great duties imposed on them, and at times unsupplied with the means necessary for the performance.

The quarter master general of an army, is an officer of great importance, & should be of high rank, active, persevering and experienced, perfectly acquainted with the geographical situation and advantages of the country in which an army is to act, so as always to draw his supplies at the least possible injury and expence. He is primarily charged with all the articles belonging to his department: on him requisitions are to be made by the division quarter masters for such stores as may be required for their divisions, which stores are to be issued on the returns of the brigade quarter masters, and so to the regimental quarter masters, who are to make and deliver returns of all stores on hand and delivered, once in three months, to the brigade quarter masters, who will consolidate and transmit them to the division quarter masters, who in like manner are to consolidate and transmit them to the quarter master general, who will transmit them to the secretary of war.

Pursuing this principle it can always be ascertained in what division, brigade or regiment, there may be delinquency.

You will please excuse the liberty I have taken in addressing you on a subject of great importance to the army either on a peace or war establishment. The importance of this subject will perhaps be more fully impressed by an application to military gentlemen who have experienced the inadequacy of the present system to the general welfare of our country.

Accept the assurances
Of my perfect esteem,

A. PARKER,
Col. 5th Infantry.

COMMERCE TO RUSSIA.

The Charge des Affaires, and Consul General of H. I. M. the Emperor of all the Russias, informs all whom it may concern, that no cargoes loaded in American ports, will be permitted to be discharged in Russian ports, unless the papers relative to the vessels and their cargoes, are legalized by Russian Consuls or Agents, according to publications already made by the Consul General—and this without any regard to the circumstance of the vessels being first bound to, or touching at, ports of other nations.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

MONDAY, April 2.

[Taken for the Alexandria Gazette.]

Mr. Quincy reported a bill providing for the better accommodation of the general post office and patent office, and for other purposes. Read twice and referred to a committee of the whole on Wednesday next.

Mr. Love from the committee to whom the subject was referred, reported a bill to establish a National Bank. Referred to a committee of the whole on Thursday next, and ordered to be printed.

The bill relative to the Batture was read a third time and passed: ayes 89, noes 16.

The unfinished business of Saturday—Mr. Randolph's resolution to repeal the non-intercourse, and Mr. Montgomery's* amendment.

Mr. Rhea moved to postpone the consideration until to-morrow.

A long debate ensued. Messrs. Randolph, Lyon, Taylor, Dana and Key spoke against the postponement. Messrs. Smilie and W. Alston in favor of the postponement.

The question was taken by ayes and noes and negatived—Ayes 57—Noes 59.

The question to consider the resolution was then taken and determined in the affirmative—55 in favor—49 against.

Mr. Randolph accepted the amendment offered by Mr. Montgomery as a modification of his motion and asked a division of the question at the place where his resolution ended, so as to take the sense of the house on the two propositions separately as he originally intended.

Mr. M'Kim moved to amend the resolution by inserting at the end of Mr. Randolph's resolution, and before Mr. Montgomery's addition, "and that provision be made by law to prohibit all importation from G. Britain and France."

Mr. Randolph also accepted this as a modification and asked a division of the question as before.

Mr. Root moved so to amend the original motion and additions as to make it read "that the non-intercourse be repealed when provision shall be made bly law to maintain, &c."

Before any question was taken the house adjourned.

* There was a mistake in our report of Saturday. Mr. Montgomery moved the amendment, not Mr. Rumford.

To be Rented for a term of years

THAT valuable tract of Land, called Preston, situate on the Washington and Alexandria turnpike road, at the junction of four mile creek and Potomac river, and distant two miles from Alexandria, three from Washington and five from George Town.—There are upon the premises a two story dwelling house, containing six rooms and a passage, with a kitchen, carriage house, stables, &c. a large, handsome and highly manured garden, of at least ten acres, in a high state of cultivation, and lately laid off by an experienced gardener, an orchard containing several hundred pear, plumb, cherry and damson trees, with English walnut, quince and mulberry trees, and also upwards of six hundred apple trees, and two or three hundred peach trees, selected with care from the best nurseries, and all in full bearing. The annual average product of the apple orchard alone is estimated at 400 barrels. This tract contains about 100 acres of land, a considerable part whereof has been manured and sown with clover seed. The shores afford fish and wild fowl, and one or two good fishing landings. The situation is healthy, elevated and pleasant, in full view of three towns, and is well calculated for a place of public entertainment. Immediate possession may be had and the terms will be made known upon application to Valuable Property for Sale.

I will sell the PLANTATION known by the name of MOUNT AIR, lying in the state of Virginia, immediately on the post road, about 9 miles from Alexandria. This farm contains upwards of seven hundred acres the soil is well adapted for wheat, corn or tobacco—there are on the farm two houses, one of which is a commodious dwelling with a good kitchen, and the other is a two story building 32 feet square, shingled and weather boarded but not finished inside, it is situated immediately on the post road and is an excellent stand for a tavern. Mr Edgar M'Carty, of Cedar Grove, who resides near this property, will on application shew it to any person desirous of purchasing.

I will also sell that valuable property known by the name of McCarty's Island, in the Potomac river, about 20 miles above George-Town—this island contains upwards of three hundred acres, the soil is equal in quality to any land in the western country, and is surpassed by none for valuable timber for house and ship building, only about 30 acres are cleared. A further description is deemed unnecessary as it is presumed that any person wanting to purchase will view it. Mr. James Middleton, who lives near this island, will shew it on application. For the above described lands a great bargain will be sold on application to the subscriber residing in George Town.
